

P. S. C. AND ESTIMATE BOARD SIGN TRUCE

Commission to Get Money Originally Asked to Carry On Work.

MUST MAKE ACCOUNTING
Detailed Information Regarding Use of Each Dollar Will Be Furnished.

Armistice terms have been signed in the great war between the Board of Estimate and the Public Service Commission over the appropriation to carry on the work of the Commission. The Board is to get the detailed information to be added in regard to the exact use to which the Commission related to put each dollar, and the Commission is to get an appropriation for February and March at the yearly rate fixed in its request.

In the course of the controversy the Commission wrote to Gov. Smith, who appeared personally before the board to appeal to it to grant the necessary money.

The Commission really will get, or have charged against it, more than it originally asked or wanted. According to the resolution drawn up last night, which will be passed by the board of Estimate at its regular meeting to-day, unless something goes wrong overnight, an appropriation will be made for the Commission for the months of February and March at the yearly rate of $1,577,508 for salaries and yearly rate of $173,544 for supplies and rent of branch offices. The city owns the building in Lafayette street, where the main offices of the commission are located.

This is a yearly total rate of $1,751,052 for the two items, which is the amount asked for in the revised request of the Public Service Commission made on January 20. It was said last night that this would enable the commission to renege the 377 engineers and other employees laid off on January 1 after the Board of Estimate had slashed the commission's budget.

Money Provisions Made.

In addition to the amount to be appropriated for salaries and supplies and rent, the resolution provides money for February and March at the following yearly rates: $140,000 for payments under the Pension law to men in the military and naval service of the United States; $40,000 to pay the expenses of the law department in defending the suits for damages caused by loss of light, air and access during subway construction (which the Board of Estimate contends must be charged up to subway construction), and $21,363 for the janitorial service of the building occupied by the commission. The latter will be spent by the Borough President.

All of the money which is to be spent on construction work will be for the issuance of corporate stock. The remainder will be in the shape of revenue bonds.

Controller Craig said last night: "On January 20 the commission made a new application for an appropriation. The following day the Controller addressed a letter to the Commission stating that the information that would be furnished as a basis for the appropriation."

On January 22 the commission replied that the information would be furnished as speedily as possible. Up to Tuesday at 5 o'clock the information had not been received, and before proceeding any further the Committee on Finance and Budget of the Board of Estimate required the attendance of Commissioner Whitney. He stated that the information was being prepared and would be furnished forthwith.

Schedules Are Submitted.

"At 5:30 o'clock this afternoon the Controller received twenty blue print schedules which purport to contain most of the information required and a letter saying the additional data would be forthcoming at the earliest possible moment."

The information requested was in regard to the number of employees the commission wished to employ, and the exact nature of that work, on (a) contracts finished but for which the final certificates had not been issued; (b) contracts not yet finished; (c) contracts set to be awarded. Further, each of these contracts was to be divided into the particular kind of contract and also as to whether it came under the city's contract with the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company or with the Interborough.

With the aid of this information it is the intention of the Controller's office to check up on all work. Never before has it been necessary for the Public Service Commission to furnish such detailed information in regard to the money required by it.

In September the commission asked for $1,751,077 for the year 1919. This was increased to $2,000,000 in December on the ground that the end of the war would enable the commission to do more work than had been planned. Claiming the commission had failed to give the required information, the Board of Estimate cut the budget to pieces and made an appropriation of $1,600,000 for the first three months of the year. The following day it was announced by the commission that they had to lay off 377 men. Various engineering bodies took action, condemning the budget cut.

Mrs. Frances Stevens, mother of Mrs. Hall, testified that her daughter had told her that while they were at Palmico she had said to her husband that she ought not to be so familiar with women and that this made him "cross."

CREDIT MEN HEAR ADVICE FROM FORT

Federal Trade Commissioner Discusses Future of American Trade.

Discusses Future of American Trade.

URGES CARE IN EXPORTS
Good Faith Alone Can Build Up Foreign Business, He Says.

Business men alive to the problems and opportunities of after the war trade, and the keenest attention to the future of American trade, was the subject of a talk by the Federal Trade Commissioner, former Governor of New Jersey, delivered last night at the Hotel Astor before the New York Credit Men's Association. More than 700 of the 2,700 members of the association attended the monthly meeting.

Commissioner Fort was introduced by E. S. Boteler, who presided. His address covered two principal topics by means of which he sought to light up the future of American trade. As regards export trade he held that the essential to success is good faith in foreign dealings, and he laid down certain principles for the guidance of American merchants and manufacturers.

Concerning domestic trade he recommended such amendments to the Sherman act as would illuminate the "willful intent" and enable cooperation and fair price fixing on the model supplied in the war by the Federal Trade Commission and the War Industries Board.

"The trouble with our country in the past," said Commissioner Fort, "is that business men, generally speaking, have not given sufficient attention to export trade. The domestic trade heretofore has been so good. There are vast fields open for export business now that the war is over. The countries that have been actually engaged in this war on the other side are naturally greatly depleted in supplies of various kinds. These include not only machinery and foodstuffs but vast lines of commodities which must be supplied as rapidly as possible. The United States has never had the opportunity to get hold of the foreign trade of Europe and Asia as it has to-day, but the trouble with us is that we may hinder rather than help in export matters if care is not taken in all methods of this character in which our business men are engaged."

Fair Dealing Necessary.
"The great problem will be to see that our merchants do not use unfair methods in attempting to sell American goods abroad. It would be very easy to make misrepresentations and improper leveling which might injure rather than help our foreign trade. Our business men must hold very high ideals in all that they do. There is just a little feeling at present in certain countries that the United States is forming associations under the Webb act which may be used to relieve responsibilities under the Sherman act and thereby put our trade in a position which it is not required to observe at home under the Sherman act. One statement is that we do not allow the trusts to operate here but we do allow them to operate abroad. The business men of the country must bear in mind a few principles: (1) That they must meet conditions which are seemingly necessary in foreign trade. The packing of our goods by American business men must be in such manner that it will be satisfactory to and conform with the requirements of the countries to which they are shipped. Much care is needed for preparing the goods for shipment to foreign ports, and it would seem that business men should establish some methods of instructing shippers along this line.

"That there must be no shipment of goods on sample where the goods do not absolutely and in perfect good faith comply with the sample upon which they are sold.

"That there should be no similarity in the names of various shippers or associations of shippers by which it would be possible to cause unfair methods of competition between shippers at home or abroad in any shipment in foreign commerce, by which one man's goods would be held out to the benefit of another man."

"American manufacturers and exporters should avoid the 'dumping' of American goods in foreign markets.

"And, and these can be stopped without taking advantage of the export trade to influence or manipulate domestic prices."

Fake American Corporations.
Commissioner Fort revealed that foreign corporations are organizing "American corporations" that are not really American owned. These have an American name and could injure American business men by selling out inferior goods. He warned that American trade must be kept absolutely clean if it is going to gain and hold additional volume, and he advised the closest supervision along these lines. He said the American business man in foreign trade is literally on trial. Unfair methods and over ingenuity might wreck the whole edifice. Selfishness would be ruinous.

"We are perfectly protected under the Federal Trade Commission act and the Clayton act against any unfair methods of trade, and these can be stopped without taking advantage of the export trade to influence or manipulate domestic prices."

"The trouble with our country in the past," said Commissioner Fort, "is that business men, generally speaking, have not given sufficient attention to export trade. The domestic trade heretofore has been so good. There are vast fields open for export business now that the war is over. The countries that have been actually engaged in this war on the other side are naturally greatly depleted in supplies of various kinds. ## MEN FIGHT DOGS FOR FOOD SCRAPS

Terrible Conditions in Holy Land Described at Relief Committee Meeting.

Contributions ranging all the way from $50,000 in Liberty bonds to a 25 cent Thrift Stamp—sent by a woman who wrote that this was all she could afford but she wanted to give her mite—poured into the chest of the Committee for Relief in the Near East yesterday and raised the hopes of the workers that they would attain their goal of $200,000.

At a luncheon in the Bankers Club the Rev. Dr. Graham Hunter, just returned to America from a trip to Palestine with the Red Cross Commission, said this sum would be little enough to succor the people who have suffered such atrocities from the Turks.

"The most unholly deeds in history were perpetrated in the Holy Land during the last four years," Dr. Hunter said. "You in this country can have no idea of the miseries inflicted by the Turks, and of the dire want and suffering which have been left in the wake of all the cruelties."

Then he read a letter from Dr. Theodore Helms, head physician of the government of Mount Lebanon, describing men and dogs fighting one another for scraps of refuse in the streets; a man so crazed by hunger that he tried to devour a child; a nursing mother defending her babe against a starving dog.

The population of Mount Lebanon, he said, had been reduced from half a million to a few thousands.

Dr. Hunter praised the work of the British Government and army for the relief of the refugees who poured into Jerusalem. "It is one of the fine things which are in line with what our Government is doing," he said.

Robert J. Cudahy told of the contributions which included $5,000 from Jacob H. Schiff, $5,000 from Mrs. John S. Kennedy, $5,000 from A. and M. Katschoulian and $1,000 from Dr. William H. Nichols. Some of the larger gifts were made anonymously. James M. Speers, chairman of the New York City drive, presided.

JURY COMPLETED TO TRY O'LEARY

Irish Agitator and Associates Face Charges of Obstructing the Draft.

The Government to-day had begun to present to a Federal jury evidence upon which it hopes to convict Jeremiah A. O'Leary, Adolph Stern, the Bull Publishing Company and the American Truth Society of alleged violation of the espionage law. A jury was finally sworn yesterday.

The indictments charge that O'Leary and his confederates violated the espionage law in procuring publication in the United States of certain cartoons and articles calculated to obstruct and retard the operations of the draft. O'Leary will be defended by John J. and Arthur J. O'Leary, brothers of the accused, until recently was in the military service with the rank of Lieutenant. The Government case will be presented by H.
